SHARPLES

Concerning the ancestry of the Sharples family of Philadelphia, we are indebted to Colonel Joseph Lemuel Chester, of London, England, the eminent genealogist. His researches were undertaken through the instigation of Henry W. Sharples of Philadelphia, and his report is dated, Dec. 3. 1878.

The origin of this family appears to be satisfactorily traced to Lancashire, and more particularly to Bolton. The existence in Bolton of a hamlet named Sharples suggests that probability that the hamlet took its name from the family, or that the family originally assumed the name of the locality in which they were living when surnames were introduced.

The name appears to have been originally Sharples, and the ancestors of the American line wrote their name thus, although we find the name spelled during the 16th and 17th centuries in various ways, as Sharples, Sharplesse, Sharpless, Sharpelesse, Sharplis and Sharplisse. The addition of a second terminating letter S in modern times is a mere matter of taste.

The family of Sharples have the right to bear the Arms recognized by the Heralds at their Visitation in 1664. It is as follows: Sable, three crescents argent, between the points of each a mullet or. Crest: a dexter hand brandishing a sword, proper.

It is impossible to trace the line of the American family further back than about the middle of the 16th century, as the registers of Bolton, the undoubted cradle of the Sharples family, do not begin until 1587.

We start with the fact that John Sharples, the emigrant to Pennsylvania in 1682, was the son of Jeffrey Sharples, of Wybunbury, Chester County, England, where he was baptised Aug. 15, 1624. The first Sharples baptism in the registers is that of Thomas, son of Richard Sharples, on Aug. 19, 1579. This Richard Sharples was the father of Jeffrey Sharples.

Jeffrey Sharples was married under a license dated April 27, 1611, to Margaret Ashley, who was baptised Jan. 21, 1583-4. They had seven children: Richard, Ellen, Margery, a child dying before baptism, John--the emigrant ancestor, Mary, and Rebecca.

John Sharples, the fifth of the above seven children, the emigrant ancestor of the family in America, was baptised at Wybunbury, Chester County, England, Aug. 15, 1624, and died April 11, 1685 at Chester, Pa. He had a grant of land from William Penn on April 5, 1682. A few months later he emigrated with his entire family to Pennsylvania, landing at Chester (then known as Upland), Aug. 14, 1682. In his will he described himself as Yeoman. He became an early convert to the doctrines of the Society of Friends and was an active member of their meeting. In Besse's Sufferings of the Quakers, the name of John Sharples is one among others as being fined for his religious principles.

John Sharples married April 27, 1662, Jane Moore, born about 1638, died Sept. 1, 1722, the sister of Daniel Moore (who married her husband's sister Margery Sharples). They had seven children: Phebe, John, Thomas, James, Caleb, Jane and Joseph.

Joseph Sharples, the youngest of the above seven children, born at Hatherton, Cheshire, England, Sept. 28, 1678, died in Middletown, Chester (now Delaware) County, Pa., 1757, married March 31, 1704, Lydia Lewis, born March 8, 1683, died 1763. They had ten children as follows: Susanna, Joseph, Benjamin, Samuel, Lydia, Nathan, Jane, Abraham, Jacob and William.

Nathan Sharples, the sixth of the above ten children, born in Middletown, Pa., Sept. 7, 1715, died 1755; married Oct. 10, 1741, Hannah Townsend, born June 9, 1718, died Dec. 31, 1790, the daughter of Joseph and Martha Townsend. They had six children, of whom three died young and one died unmarried. The other two children were Martha, who married Jacob Haines, and William--as below.

William Sharples, just mentioned, was born in Goshen township (now West Chester, Pa.,) Jan. 9, 1752, died Oct. 11, 1817. Being the only surviving son he inherited the homestead farm. In 1795, he was elected a member of the Pennsylvania Society for the Abolition of Slavery. He was a prominent man in his day; frequently employed as attorney-in-fact, trustee, executor and guardian. He married Oct. 7, 1773, Ann Hunt, born Jan. 16, 1755, died Nov. 5, 1820, daughter of William and Sarah Hunt of Westtown township. They had seven children, of whom two died young. Of the other children, there was only one son, Nathan Hunt Sharples.

Nathan Hunt Sharples, just mentioned, born in West Goshen, West Chester, Pa., May 18, 1779, died March 22, 1838. For a time he was in the brick manufacturing business. In 1826 he was elected a member of the Chester County Cabinet of Natural Science, and assisted it with both purse and pen until 1837, when he was appointed chairman of a committee to build new hall for the Society. In 1830, he erected Price's Boarding School for his father-in-law Philip Price, and Hannah P. Davis, daughter of the latter, who conducted it for several years with great success. He was one of the trustees of West Chester Academy, which was later supplanted by the State Normal School. As executor, guardian, auditor, appraiser and arbitrator, his services were in frequent demand. He was a consistent member of the Society of Friends, serving as clerk for many years.

Nathan Hunt Sharples married Oct. 11, 1804, Martha Price, born in Philadelphia, Nov. 3, 1785, died Sept. 11, 1852, daughter of Philip and Rachel (Kirk) Price, of the old Philadelphia family of that name. They had seven children as follows: Hannah, William P., Philip P., Henry P., Ann, Alfred and Samuel Emlen.

Samuel Emlen Sharples, the youngest of the above seven children, born July 28, 1828; owned extensive brick yards and later joined in the coal business under the name of Sharples & Hall, and still later established the lumber business under the director of Sharples & Hall of West Chester, Pa. He married March 10, 1852, Martha S. Ash, born July 13, 1831, daughter of Robert P. and Hannah (Serrill) Ash. They had seven children as follows; Martha, Robert Pennel, Philip M., Edward Darlington, David Townsend, Serrill J., and H. Mary.

Philip M. Sharples, the third of the above seven children, born Aug. 10, 1857, died April 13, 1944; educated at West Chester State Normal School. He manufactured the first cream separator in the United States and founded the Sharples Separator Co., for their manufacture at West Chester, Pa., which grew from a one-man machine shop to a firm that did a world-wide business. He was for many years a trustee of Swarthmore College; a director of Yenching University, Pekin, China; first vice-president Keystone Automobile Club, and Kemp Furniture Co., Goldsboro, N.C.; director General Refractories Co., Glen Mills School and Penn Athletic Club; president Farmers and Mechanics Bank, and White Heat Products Co. Louis Ehrhart Reber was born Nittany, Pa., Feb. 27, 1858, died May 12, 1948; the son of Jacob and Elizabeth Reber. Graduated B. S., Pennsylvania State College 1880, M.S., 1887; Mass. Inst. Tech. 1883; D. Sc., Pennsylvania State College, 1908. Dean of Engineering, Pennsylvania State College, 1895 to 1907; this was the early period of great growth of that School of Engineering which has had an important part in the development of engineering education in this country. Dean of the Extension Division University of Wisconsin, 1907 to 1926; his name is associated particularly with the rise of university extension education in the United States. In 1913 a group of 150 easterners, including the Governors of Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, chartered a special train in order to travel to Madison, Wis., to study the "Wisconsin Idea," Dean Reber's ideas and accomplishments in extension education being among the subjects of special interest to them.

In World War I he served the United States Government, directed education and training for the Emergency Fleet Corp. and organized the A.E.F. project for trade and engineering training in the field and at the Army University at Beaume, France. Honorary officer of the French Academy. Was a member of many civic, scientific and educational organizations and societies.
